Remember when we all used IODINE?

Every family had a bottle in the medicine cabinet. We knew that it was the best to kill germs. We had iodine added to our salt but it was predominantly found in most baked goods. In fact, one slice of bread supplied all the iodine that the RDA required (150 mcg). By 1980 the baking industry replaced iodine with bromine, another halide that competes for the iodine receptor sites. In time, the iodine receptor sites were so bound by the bromine that any iodine intake was not utilized. Shortly after, a predominance of problems began to appear in the population, including breast & thyroid cancer and other autoimmune thyroid disorders.
